

Job Title: Deputy Director Sustainable Business

Location(s) National

Salary – £70,000 to £90,119

The role (200 words max)

The Deputy Director Sustainable Business role is one for a proven leader with a passion for sustainability, people and performance.

You will work across the entire organisation and with partners to enable delivery of the Environment Agency's sustainability ambition. Your work will resonate for generations. A passion for sustainability and the environment will be advantageous – this role requires a proven leader and experience of delivering results and cultural change across an organisation.

In this wide-ranging role, you will provide strategic leadership, professional services and assurance to ensure sustainability is fully integrated across the organisation. The role will work with the business and Defra Group helping it find new ways of working in order to deliver the challenges that Government have set, so the level and sphere of influence will need to be high and wide.

This is an exciting opportunity to have a huge impact and create a legacy on a grand scale. You'll inspire at every turn and leave the environment in a better condition than when you took responsibility for it.

The Team (75 words max)

This is a substantial Executive Management role that will be key in supporting a driven team committed to creating a better place for people and wildlife. They will be the conscience of the organisation ensuring the EA delivers its own standard of compliance and environmental protection. They will help to shape your vision and leadership and be empowered to improve the world around them. You will report directly to the Director of Operations National Services.

Experience/skills required (150)

This is a role for an executive with a flair for fostering an environment where people thrive. Additionally, a reputation for excelling in both strategy and delivery is essential. You'll be used to working with high levels of autonomy, be an experienced leader and natural communicator with plenty of business experience.

You will need to have a good understanding of sustainability as the role provides technical leadership across the sustainability agenda. It doesn't matter what your background – it's your passion for sustainability and your flair for influencing, delivering and embedding innovation that's key.
